

1. (Currently amended) A piston for a suction valve, comprising:

a head for engaging said top surface of said valve seat and a stem extending downwardly from said head through said valve seat, said stem having a first transverse aperture and a second transverse aperture; said second aperture opens to said first aperture, both said first and second aperture are at a lower portion of said stem, said first aperture at a right angle to said second aperture.